

Dimple Kirpalani

I was introduced to homoeopathy in my early teens as a patient suffering from asthma. That experience went on to affect my choices in life for years to come. For the past 23 years, I have been practising as a homoeopath and anyone who is familiar with me knows how passionate about homoeopathy I am.

I have had the good fortune of studying under some of the greatest teachers, not only homoeopaths but also conventional medicine physicians and surgeons. I gratefully acknowledge that these teachers left their mark on me and gave me a level of confidence and clarity in work that I would never have otherwise gained. Education has always been my strength. I hold numerous diplomas and certificates in various fields of medicine and homoeopathy.

After completing my education in India, I moved to Ghana, West Africa, where I practised as an integrated physician for 11 years after sitting for exams and registering with GAMPA. Life then brought me to Perth with my family. Over the years my practice has grown simply by word of mouth. I am an active member in the homoeopathic community, and I truly believe that knowledge increases by sharing and strength lies in numbers. This belief powers my involvement with various teaching and mentoring activities. It is my good fortune that I am now mentoring the next generation of homoeopaths as they complete their education with the International Academy of Classical Homeopathy and join our faculty in Australia.
